4 Read the article and complete the graphic organizer with the pros and cons of social networking.

_____ / 12

Social networking is a new way to communicate with one another with positive and negative sides. Social websites give you a chance to connect with people around the world, but you have to be careful not to replace real relationships for online interactions.

Another good aspect is that it gives us access to easy, instant communication to our family and friends. One negative aspect to consider is that when we sign up, we allow the platform to use our personal content including our pictures, which could limit our privacy.

On one hand, we can get real time information. On the other hand, it does not necessarily mean that it is always true. We can find a lot of false or unreliable information on these sites.

Another benefit is that you can promote your business in social nets. Many people can have access to different kinds of products if they see them on a social net. But, this can also be a negative aspect because you can buy a product that does not satisfy you only because it was advertised on social media.

Something positive is that you can have lots of fun chatting on these sites. However, another downside is that there are more cyberbullying cases through the net each day.

As with most things in life, there is a big discussion between experts who believe this tool can help students perform better at school. For example, many students talk about their school assignments with friends to clarify their doubts. Unfortunately, some experts say that social nets can become a severe distraction for students, lowering their grades as a result.

The Legend of the Fifth Sun

(Anonymous Aztec legend)

At the end of the fourth sun, the gods gathered at Teotihuacan to decide who had to sacrifice him/herself for the new world to begin. The god Huehuetéotl—the old god of fire—made a fire, but none of the most important gods wanted to jump into the flames. The rich and proud god Tecuciztecatl—Lord of the Snails—hesitated, but the humble and poor Nanahuatzin jumped into the flames and became the new sun.

Tecuciztecatl jumped in after him to become a second sun. However, the gods realized that two suns would provide too much light to the world, so they threw a rabbit at Tecuciztecatl and he became the moon—that is why you can still see the rabbit in the moon today. Ehecatl, the god of the wind, fiercely and violently blew the sun into motion.

Sean and the Silkie

One day, a fisherman was walking on the sea shore when he saw the most beautiful woman he had ever seen. She sat on the rocks combing her long red hair. "Who is she? He wondered. "I've never seen her before" he thought, "She's got to be a silkie." And he noticed her skin lying on the rock beside her.

Sean rushed and grabbed quickly what it looked like a seal's skin. The woman looked up with a sad expression on her face.

“Will you not give me back my skin?” She asked sadly.

“No,” said Sean. “I am the only man in the village without a wife. I know selkies make the best wives. You will be my wife.”

Sean married three days later, and he locked the selkie’s skin in secret box and kept the key on a chain around his neck.

Sean’s marriage was good. His wife gave him three strong sons and two beautiful daughters. Sean was happy, but his wife was really sad, she used to sit by the sea and weep specially on full moon nights.

One day, Sean left his house for a week on a fishing trip and he asked his eldest son to take care of his mom. That night the boy found his mother weeping at the sea and asked her why. Her mother confessed to him she was a silkie and that she belonged to the sea. The boy then knew what he had to do.

He found the secret box his father had hidden on the corner of a room and gave it to his mom.

She opened it and there it was! Her skin! She thanked her son and told him she would never forget them. She took the skin, ran out of the door directly to the sea. As she reached the sea, she put on her skin and changed back into her seal form and swam far out to sea. She was never seen again since then.
